1990) provides that a body known as the Federal Road Safety Commission shall consist of uniformed and non-uniformed members. The non-uniformed members or Special Marshals are the volunteer arm of the Federal Road Safety Commission. The Act empowers the Special Marshals to carry out patrol, rescue and other activities that ensure good road usage on our highways. They also take part and occasionally sponsor researches, public education and other activities of the commission. Enrolment into the Special Marshal arm of the commission shall be on group or individual basis. All Special Marshals must be kitted with the prescribed regalia and identity cards (ID). In the event of any Special Marshal leaving the outfit, he/she must surrender his kits and ID card to the Commanding Officer. 1.
