A paper discusses the challenges in identifying relevant systematic reviews on alcohol-impaired driving. The authors propose a register to systematically identify and evaluate interventions targeting this issue, starting with a broad search strategy in electronic databases and other sources. The register, developed by the Cochrane Injuries Group, aims to provide a comprehensive and accessible resource for researchers and policymakers.

References